provider of the income and employment is facing a sharp drop in employment and income as a result of the import policy;

SATYANARAYANA RAO): (a) to (c) There has been an upward trend in agricultural production in recent years showing a positive influence on income and employment. Against the normative foodgrain requirement of 192.39 million tonnes for the year 1999, the production of foodgrains was estimated to be 203.04 million tonnes for the crop year 1998-99. Thus, the country has become not only self-sufficient, but also in a position to export foodgrains. In 1999-2000, the country is expected to achieve a record foodgrain production of 205.94 million tonnes. The Government has been using import tariffs as an instrument to protect the interests of the farmers and towards this end, the basic import-tariffs has been raised on a number of agricultural items, in recent months.
